

Patricia Ranieri

Patricia Ranieri is a current resident of New City where she was raised. She spent most of her life visiting the New City Library. One of her earliest memories is when her aunt brought her to the New City Library as a young child to check out her first novel, The Secret Garden. She now has her own young child and is excited about enjoying time with her at the Library and taking part in the wonderful young children's programs that are fun, encourage reading, enriching, and provides a sense of community for both herself and her daughter.

Ranieri is an attorney, licensed to practice in New York and New Jersey. She is a graduate of Pace Law School and holds a B.A. in Political Science from SUNY Albany.

As a proud member of the New City Library Board of Trustees for the past year, Ranieri is eager to continue serving the Library and community at large. She has been a part of the Buildings and Grounds Committee, the Legal Affairs Committee, and the Patio Paver Project Committee. She is excited about serving again as a Trustee and being part of the Redesign Project to expand and upgrade the Library services.
